

Interview Sheet — one page, keep this to yourself

Purpose: find out whether NRS already knew these, and whether we'd act.
Not to get approval for anything.

Before you start — say this

"I'm testing whether public data can find opportunities we'd otherwise miss.
There are five. For each one I want to know if we already knew about it.
'We knew that' is the most useful answer you can give me — it tells me to stop. Please don't be kind about it."

Then: no opinions from you until all five are done.

Three rules

- 1. Ask "did you already know?" before turning to the interpretation section.
- 2. Never say which one you think is best.
- 3. Don't defend a card if it gets dismissed. Write down why and move on.

Per card — ask in this order

① Did you already know about this? (circle one — ask before discussing)

A	Never heard of it
B	Vaguely aware of the project
C	Knew the project — but not that this waste work was happening
D	Already chasing it

→ If they hesitate between B and C, ask: "Did you know there was contaminated material coming off it?" — this distinction is the single most important thing on the sheet.

② If you knew — how, and roughly when?

③ Would NRS actually do anything about this? Yes / No / Not yet — and why?

④ Who exactly would you contact? (a name, company or role — "the developer" isn't enough)

⑤ Roughly what's it worth if it lands? <£10k / £10–50k / £50–250k / £250k+ / can't tell → if "can't tell", ask what's missing

⑥ Would you have found this through what we already use? When?

⑦ What would stop us acting on it?

	Card 1 RR Sinfin A	Card 2 Alpha Anodizing	Card 3 Mell Square	Card 4 JLR Lode Lane	Card 5 HS2 / EKFB
① Knew? A/B/C/D
② How / when
③ Would pursue?
④ Who'd you call
⑤ Value band
⑥ Own sources?
⑦ Blocker

At the end

⑧ "Of those five, how many were genuinely new to you?"

⑨ "How do opportunities normally reach you now?" (customers / contractors / tenders / Barbour or similar / word of mouth)

⑩ "Do we pay for anything like Barbour ABI or Glenigan? What does it do well, where does it let us down?"

⑪ "Who does this kind of research here, and how much time goes into it?"

⑫ "How far will we economically haul contaminated soil? Does Derby work?"

→ Needed whatever the outcome.

Interviewer copy — not for circulation

⑬ "If five to ten of these arrived every week, how many could the team actually work before it became noise?"

⑭ "What would make this useless to us?" (let the silence run)

⑮ The one that counts: "Would you like these five as something you can act on?"

→ Then say nothing further and do nothing for two weeks. If anyone actually rings one of these counterparties without you prompting again, that matters more than everything else on this page.

Interpreting it afterwards — for you, not for the room

Card 3 (Mell Square) is a control. 1,600 homes, Muse and GRAHAM, 9 km away, covered in the trade press. They should score it B, C or D. If your manager has never heard of it, they're not close enough to the commercial pipeline for the rest of their answers to mean much — note that and treat the session as indicative only.

What counts as genuinely new: A and C only.

B is not new — if they can't say how and when they heard, downgrade it to A.

D is not new.

C is the interesting result. If they knew the projects but not that the waste work was live, then the value isn't finding projects — it's spotting the waste event inside projects everyone can already see. That's a different product, and it would mean Barbour is a supplier rather than a competitor.

"That's interesting" counts as nothing. A card only counts as actionable if they give you why, who, what and when without being led. Write INTERESTING in the box if that's all you got, and count them up later.

Rough read:

Result	What it means
3+ scored A or C and they name who to call	Worth taking further
Mostly C	The value is interpretation, not discovery — different product
1–2 new, all one type (e.g. industrial remediation)	Narrow to that niche
Mostly B or D	We already know this stuff. Stop.
Warm words, nobody rings anyone in two weeks	Treat as a no

Write your answers down in the room. Not afterwards from memory — that's when you'll remember it more favourably than it was.
